In Restoring the Lost Constitution, Randy Barnett argues that since the nation's founding, but especially since the 1930s, the courts have been cutting holes in the original Constitution and its amendments to eliminate the parts that protect liberty from the power of government. From the Commerce Clause, to the Necessary and Proper Clause, to the Ninth and Tenth Amendments, to the Privileges or Immunities Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment, the Supreme Court has rendered each of these

Reception. In Ethics Matthew Simpson criticized Restoring the Lost Constitution, stating that while Barnett "argues persuasively that an unprincipled judiciary poses a great threat to constitutionalism in America his own principle for reading the Constitution, the presumption of liberty, is implausible and deeply flawed".

"Randy Barnett's Restoring the Lost Constitution is an 'achievement' book. Although not as long or as difficult to read as some books I have read, finishing Restoring the Lost Constitution left me feeling filled and enlightened, even accomplished on a small scale. There is a tremendous amount of information - historical, legal, ideological - in Randy Barnett's book. Completing it made me feel

Randy Barnett's Restoring the Lost Constitution is a surprising book. It is surprising that a scholar as learned and competent as Barnett should undertake the defense of libertarianism a perspective on the state and on law unfashionable among the intelligentsia for a century. It is surprising that he should defend it so well and reasonably.

It is even more surprising that such a strong and
